5	Park should be left much as it is, which draws a variety of people and activities since it is large, open and easily accessible. It nicely accommodates everyone from young parents with infants (they love the baby swing) to teams of young soccer and baseball players and trainers. There are dog-walkers, most of whom pick up after their canines, frisbee tossers, a few golfers and, rarely, a would-be tightrope walker. It's remarkable how those who use the three swings range in ages from infants to seniors.	9/7/2017 10:40 AM

7	flat level ground to allow a wheelchair to utilize the park safely. The disabled child lives on Andamar Way and it is always a hassle to take him there as the park is not accommodating.	9/10/2017 10:51 PM
8	Do not install major, space-eating play structures here. A new, similar swing set with one or two more big-kid swings would be used. I also suggest your focus should be on serving all members of the neighborhood, including seniors who often bring young children to the park to watch them from under shade trees.	9/7/2017 10:40 AM
